

Dr Melissa Chan Wei Shan

General Practitioner

MB, BCh, BAO (Hons) (NUI)

Expertise & Clinical Interests

Dr Melissa Chan is a General Practitioner with a special interest in preventive health and lifestyle medicine. She enjoys partnering with patients to improve their overall health and wellbeing through early detection, preventive care, and practical, sustainable lifestyle changes. Her areas of interest include health screening, chronic disease prevention, nutrition, exercise, sleep health, stress management, and healthy ageing.

Education & Clinical Experience

Dr Chan graduated from the University College Cork, National University of Ireland, in 2017. She subsequently trained across a range of hospital specialties, including Internal Medicine, Obstetrics and Gynaecology, and Emergency Medicine, providing her with a strong foundation in caring for patients with a wide variety of acute and chronic medical conditions.

Over the past two years, she has worked as a dedicated health screening physician, where she developed expertise in preventive medicine, cardiovascular risk assessment, interpreting screening results, and identifying health concerns early. She believes that early detection, together with personalised preventive care, plays an important role in helping patients achieve better long-term health.

Patient-Centred Care

Dr Chan believes that good healthcare begins with listening. She strives to create a welcoming and supportive environment where patients feel comfortable discussing their health concerns and goals. Taking the time to understand each person's individual needs, she works collaboratively with patients to develop practical, evidence-based care plans that fit their lifestyle.

Whether managing an acute illness, supporting patients with chronic conditions, or helping individuals stay healthy through preventive care, Dr Chan is committed to providing compassionate, holistic care that empowers patients to make informed decisions and achieve lasting improvements in their health and wellbeing.
